

CARIBBEAN FLAMINGO CONSERVATION PROGRAM

Become a Conservation Ally

Bands tell stories that cross borders. Science turns those stories into conservation action.

Caribbean Flamingos connect the wetlands of Yucatán, Florida, Cuba, and other regions. Monitoring banded individuals through verified community reports makes it possible to document their movements, identify priority wetlands, and assess the threats they face. This evidence helps guide conservation action across the region.

Your support makes it possible to:

1. Monitor their movements, survival, and population changes over time.
2. Identify sites where injured or dead flamingos are most frequently reported and assess the possible causes.
3. Study their habitats and the factors that influence their use of wetlands.

How You Can Help

Individuals, companies, and organizations can contribute to FlamencoLab's work as a whole or support a specific activity. All contributions are received by Fundación Hábitat Más, A.C., the Mexican nonprofit organization that operates FlamencoLab.

Choose Your Level of Support

Conservation Ally: A contribution of any amount. You will receive a Conservation Ally certificate and updates on FlamencoLab's work.

Conservation Benefactor: An annual contribution of US$200 or more. You will receive a Conservation Benefactor certificate, updates on FlamencoLab's work, and public recognition on the FlamencoLab website with your name or, if you represent a company or organization, its logo.
